2. (S/NF/SK) The target was Westminster Burying Grounds, Baltimore, Maryland. This quaint cemetery with its associated century old stone chapel and rectories is the final resting place for numerous Civil War military and civilian dignitaries. Perhaps most notably the great American author of the macabre, Edgar Allan Poe in interred at this site. Many of the ornate headstones bear historic eulogies and are reminiscent of a time past when the art of the tombstone was as important an artform as museum class items.

3. (S/NF/SK) Initially Source had little trouble acquiring what is believed to be the prober site and descriptives such as, "pieces cut out in designs, little, big, jutting, placed (position), fragmented", seemed to be references to the varying shapes of the headstones. Then an "unfortunate" incident occurred when Source, apparently seeking items of interest, "entered" a, "opening, long, slender, low to the ground, I can't stand up, I'm entering on my stomach, dirty, not for people to use but it's manmade, cold, dark, damp, dirty, only I can go in, I can't sit up, it sits in a wooded area..." Following this series of descriptives, Source had a very difficult time staying on target and tended to digress to describing individuals with somewhat unusual characteristics reminiscent of primitive natives, i.e. "men, harsh men, regimented, wear(ing) something around his neck, barbaric, primitive, takes nourishment from the woods..." These individuals were all associated with the concept of a large group of people "sleeping together in a large room", in cold, harsh, dark surroundings. Other concepts dealt with water images and people working around the water which may have been a description of the nearby Baltimore Harbor. In both cases, the data following the entry into the dark chamber, (believed to be a crypt or casket), was caused by trauma of actually being in a crypt and the subsequent avoidance mechanism to either stay away from the site or to report on the presence of corpses in more traumatically acceptable terms, i.e. "sleeping men in one area". In any case, the data provided was nevertheless very important in that it provided an indicator of this Source's methodology in handling the presence of death.

I felt ~~Erica~~ circles on top of circles, overlapping, overlaying, overlooping. I felt I was outside in a cold-wooded area. I felt animals scattered. I then felt I came upon water. In the wooded area, I came upon a man-made structure built low to the ground, with a domed entrance & I entered it on my stomach. I could not stand or sit ~~in~~ in this structure. It felt. It was cold & damp & dark inside.

As I came to the water, I sensed people worked in the water. I sensed fish. But the water was not deep. It was green.

I kept getting the circle feeling & I felt like I was looking at a jigsaw puzzle. I felt that pieces were cut out. I then felt I was looking at art.

Then I sensed people. These people had to watch their movements. Whatever work they did, they watched movements. They could not just ordinarily walk.

Then I sensed people - men, rugged men sleeping in a large room that ~~was~~ had nothing in it but beds. Not a cozy room. I sensed that a group of people - men - ate, slept, & worked together.

I sensed one man had something in his ears. I sensed another [illegible]

man. This was from the ~~first~~ first primitive.
I then sensed a bumpy,
lumpy feeling.
~~Going back~~ Then I sensed sailing. I also felt something flying.
Going back in time, the
area was much cleaner,
much brighter, much greener.
I sensed people but I
was not correct.
Coming back, I sensed
sailing, hunting.
I kept seeing a
big thick ~~fur~~ naked
man or felt the presence of one.
